It is an admirable review of the poetry of South Carolina, and if not complete it is full enough to reflect the glory of South Carolina in poetry. In this paper, Mr. Obear praises Hayne and Timrod in strong rod's well known lines: "Hark to the shouting wind! Hark to the flying rain!

And I care not though I never see A bright blue sky again. There are thoughts in my heart to-day That are not for human speech, But I hear them on the driving storm And the roar upon the beach. And O to be with that ship That I watch through the blinding brine! O wind! for thy sweep of land and O sea! for a voice like thine.'

And he adds "In our judgment, this is fully equal to Tennyson's famous song: Break, break, break!

On thy cold gray stones, O sea!" In closing his article, Mr. Obear says with genuine feeling: "If South Carolina be justly proud of her Calhoun and her Hayne as her statesmen, of her Johnson and her Wardlaw as jurists, of her McDuffie and her Preston as orators, she may be as justly proud of the long procession of her sons and daughters who have wooed the muses. Be it her care to see to it that their names perish not, and be it our pride and our glory that to this sacred duty we have brought our willing aid." Good words these, and let the melody of the sentiment be blended with the memory of the "vanished hand" that penned them-and of the "sound of a roice that is still." Columbia, S. C., Nov. 20th, 1897.

ADVERTISING ALONE-

WON'T sell goods. There has got to be something BACK of the advertisement. There has got to be something in the advertisement besides wind and big words. There has got to be TRUTH in it. There has got to be BELIEF in it. It is a bad mistake to think that people don't notice what is going on. They do. They look at things pretty sharply.
